

Interactive Annual Review activity for Children & Young People

'How to' Guide

Here is a really useful way that you can give your views in an Annual Review without actually having to say a word (If that's what you prefer). This activity allows you to share your thoughts on all things about school/college and education. You might wish to do this on your own or ask a parent or carer to help you.

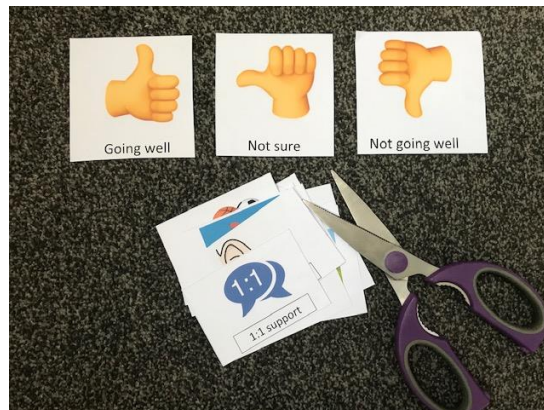

What you will need:

- Picture cards printed out
- Scissors
- A clear area to sit (like at a table or floor space)
- A camera or phone to take a picture

Step 1

Print off the picture cards and cut each one out separately

Step 2

Find somewhere comfy to sit and lay out the thumbs cards like this

Step 3

Make a pile of your picture cards and look at each one carefully. Take the first card and place it under the heading that you think.

(Helpful hint: try not to question the child/ young person's choices as they go through- you can do this at the end to understand their thought processes)

Is it going well?

Not sure?

Not going well?

Step 4

Once you have placed all your cards in their places it might look something like this...

Step 5

Take a picture of your interactive Annual Review activity and you can send this directly to your SENCO at school or college. This will help them understand your views before an Annual Review to see what things are going well or not so well and how they can help you. You can update your activity as many times as you want.
